

ABSTRACT

An adjustment device for a vehicle component includes a first locking toothing and a rocking lever, the rocking lever being able to be set in a stable locking position and a stable release position as a result of a control element acting on a spring.